WHO IS ELIGIBLE?

Students attending New York City public high schools are eligible if they:
- demonstrate an interest in art and design;
- are self-motivated and responsible;
- maintain good school attendance; and
- submit their art teacher's or school administrator's recommendation.

Dice exposes participants to the challenges of creative thinking and prepares them to pursue their goals through classes in various design disciplines, including graphic, product, and fashion design. No previous training is required—just an interest and willingness to learn! Our goal is to create unique and stimulating educational experiences, while introducing local youth to advanced educational opportunities and career possibilities in the world of design.

Graphic Design

All classes meet at Pratt Institute on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 4:30-6:30 PM.

CLASSES

Graphic design is the visual language of everyday life, present in everything from advertisements and film titles to household items. Using a multimedia approach, students will explore the function of type and image in branding, marketing, and book design. Students will confront real-world design challenges and develop creative strategies through each phase of the design process, while learning Adobe Photoshop and Illustrator techniques.

Fashion Design

In this class, students will be introduced to the historical and cultural practices of contemporary fashion design, while exploring various hands-on techniques such as fashion illustration, hand and loom weaving, fabric coloring, and printing. The cycle of fashion and textile design and its production will be investigated while considering the effect it has on the community and environment.
